Description

Leverich's long experience as an editor of volumes of nature poetry and his love for the natural world are on full display in this fine volume. Margaret Bobalek of Derry, New Hampshire says that this work, "captures the open sea, the bluster of wind, the seagulls crying, the eternal elements beating on your skin." Holly Diane Shaw of New York City comments, "I felt as if I were there, inside the poems; they remind me of some of my favorite poets: Kenyon, Oliver, Paley, Howe."
