Description

This is an exciting new voice who brings great energy and fresh insight onto this engaging first collection. J. N. Fishhawk of the Bacopa Literary Review says of this book: "These are traveling poems, moving from the bedroom to the classroom, to the cab of a truck, to riverside cliffs, and to New England pastures by way of India, Spain, and central America. This is a book made to be carried along and read as the poems give the impression they were composed in the quiet spaces of pause and reflection that interrupt our journeys, whether we are walking home from the store or crossing oceans to find new homes."
